Showcase of Rutgers Supply Chain Management Curriculum for High Schools

The New Jersey Department of Education’s (NJDOE) Office of Career Readiness collaborated with the Rutgers University Business School on the development of a rigorous project-based-learning career and technical education (CTE) program of study in Supply Chain Management.

Rutgers University and the Office of Career Readiness will host a presentation on the Supply Chain Management program from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on January 16, 2020 at Rutgers Business School, 100 Rockafeller Road, Piscataway, NJ. Go to the NJDOE’s Calendar of Events to register for the program. Registration is required by January 10, 2020.

Those attending this Supply Chain Management presentation will:

• Learn about the national success and recognition of the Rutgers Supply Chain postsecondary program, career opportunities for both high school and postsecondary graduates, and highlights of the high school Supply Chain Management program;
• Observe high school teams as they compete in the supply chain management showcase and talk to participants about their experience;
• Discover how the program will be supported by annual professional development for teachers; and
• Hear about the industry credential and articulated credit from Rutgers that are critical components of this program.

The NJDOE appreciates your commitment to enhancing CTE programs in New Jersey. Should you have any questions, contact the Office of Career Readiness at (609) 376-9067 or at cte@doe.nj.gov.
